Argentina Needs Capital for Further Development

Opportunity for United States to Invest and to Increase Commerce-A Few Unscrupulous Merchants Must First Improve Their Business Methods.

By JOHN H. FAHEY,

Formerly President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The Argentine Republic, in most respects the leading country of South America, is an excellent illustration of the development which comes from the intelligent investment of capital in a than $1,000,000 a year ago. For the calendar year of 1916 the United States will sell nearly as much as, if not more will sell nearly as much as, if not more than, Great Britain in the Argentine.

Then purchasing agents rep-resenting the allies were appointed to buy the cereals, the result of the process being, it is claimed, that the grain had to be offered to them at their own prices. To this the citizens of the Argentine object. Meetings of protest have been held, and recently the government, in cooperation with other South American republics, has taken the matter up insistently with Great. These two questions are occupying

Argentina as a whole, about one-third the size of the United States and with only 2,000,000 people, is much like our Middle West—a great farming and grazing land. From Buenos Ayres to the Andes the traveller crosses a plain almost as smooth as a table, with no trees except about the widely separated homes. A large part of the area now inhabited is of this character, but despite the enormous progress made in the last thirty years only a third of the land suitable for farming is yet in use. There are large undeveloped mining and forest values, but meat and the cereals are the big business items.

The conductress of the motor omnibus taking me home ran lightly up the stairs, smiled garly at a fellow passenger, who raised his hat and said "Good night" as he left, and gave a gleeful laugh as a sudden lurch of the bus made her cling to the handrail. Then she knocked a speck of dust from her high leather leggings, pulled her smart white summer overall more into place, adjusted her straw sailor hat and took my fare, with a word of thanks.

Our buying from the big republic has also taken a great jump. In 1914 the figure was $15,000,000. This year it is over $100,000,000. Our purchases of hides were $17,000,000 two years ago. Now they are $22,000,000. Wool was $18,000,000 in 1915, but for 1916 it is $23,000,000. Meat, however, was but $5,000,000 this year, against more than
